Course Description:

This course will look at religion and politics in the United States from three interrelated perspectives:

a) What are the theoretical religious foundations for the founding of the United States? What does it mean to be a democracy devoted to religious freedom when those founders are members of the same religious group and the founding of the country was based on religious motivations including escaping religious persecution?

b) What are the core religion-based public policies in effect or under consideration in the United States? How does the policy making and implementation process work in the U.S. to bring about religion-based policy? What constitute the core intra-state and inter-state conflicts surrounding these religion based public policies or policy proposals?

c) How does religion motivate and impact political behavior in the United States? How does religion impact who has political power? How does religion motivate power-seeking behavior in the United States?

Why look at the United States?

The United States was founded by homogeneous religious groups seeking refuge from religious persecution. The U.S. claims to be a democracy while at the same time it is clear that one religious orientation dominates its political system. Religion is also a prime motivator and influence on political behavior and, as a result, how the political system functions, including party structures, electoral outcomes, campaign strategies, voter mobilization and other grassroots efforts, are all affected by religious commitments.

Course Goals: The primary goals of this course are to understand the relationship between religion and politics in democratic theocracies from four core perspectives: theoretical orientations, mass-level participation, elite behavior, and public policy. The course will focus on these factors in the United States.

Course Objectives: At the end of this course, you will be able to develop approaches to analyzing the relationship between religion and politics in democratic theocracies, and critique the role that religion plays in mass-level participation, elite behavior and public policy. You will also be able to evaluate how religion and politics affects and is affected by political and electoral institutions.

The course text is: Religion and Politics in the United States (6th edition) by Kenneth Wald and Allison Calhoun-Brown. Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, Inc.; ISBN-10: 1442201525/ISBN-13: 978-1442201521

Grading Procedures

Final grades are determined through the use of the following letter grades: A, A-, B+, B, B-, C+, C, C-, D+, D, D-, F. Grades of A+, F+ and F- are not used.

Numerical grades compute into letter grades as follows:

Grade	Score Range
A	95 and up
A-	90-94
B+	87-89
B	83-86
B-	80-82
C+	77-79
C	73-76
C-	70-72
D+	67-69
D	63-66
D-	60-62
F	59 and below

Numerical grades will be determined for all examinations and discussion questions, and then converted to letter grades as noted above. Once letter grades have been determined for all assessments, letter grades are associated with the following scale:

Grade	Associated Score
A	11
A-	10
B+	9
B	8
B-	7
C+	6
C	5
C-	4
D+	3

D	2
F	0

Using this scale, weights are assigned based on the syllabus. All of your scores are then determined and weighted accordingly. This overall score is then divided by 100 and applied to the 0-11/A-F grading scale above. Note: Grades are not rounded.
