Call for manuscripts for the Journal of International Crisis and Risk Communication Research

The Nicholson School of Communication at the University of Central Florida announces the founding of the Journal of International Crisis and Risk Communication Research. Published biannually, the journal will publish articles on issues associated with crisis, risk and emergency situations at the national and international levels, where communication plays a central role in preventing or mitigating harms facing diverse publics. Timothy Sellnow serves as editor in chief and Matthew Seeger is managing editor for issues one and two. The journal is supported by an international editorial board comprised of top risk and crisis communication scholars.

Submission Details:
The Journal of International Crisis and Risk Communication Research invites manuscripts of a philosophical, theoretical, methodological, critical, applied, pedagogical or empirical nature. Work may focus on organizationally based events and risks, such as:

- product recalls
- management misconduct
- toxic spills and accidents
- politically motivated acts of violence
- work place violence or similar threats
- Work may also focus on community or regionally based events and risks, such as hurricanes, floods, wild fires and infectious disease outbreaks of similar threats.

Submissions may not have been published elsewhere or be currently under consideration for any other publication.

Manuscripts are accepted on the basis of their quality and appropriateness. The journal uses blind peer review, with the recommendations of the reviewers providing the foundation for final judgment regarding publication.

Manuscripts must be prepared in accordance with the most recent edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. Submissions should contain no more than 8,000 words (including tables, references, endnotes and appendices). No indicators of authorship should appear anywhere in the manuscript. Author details and acknowledgements may be included in the separate cover letter.

Manuscripts received by November 1, 2017 will be given priority consideration for Volume 2, Issue 1. Manuscripts received by May 1, 2018 will be given priority consideration for Volume 2, Issue 2. Send a cover letter, abstract, and complete text of the manuscript (including references, tables and figures). For more Information contact Dr. Tim Sellnow at Timothy.Sellnow@ucf.edu.
